Our goal is to convert the property on the corner of Main Street and Washington Street into the Julian Town Square; a community park and outdoor entertainment space; a positive social space creating meaningful opportunities; an epicenter of art, theater and a gathering space for community members and tourists alike.

JCHF has purchased the corner lot, and we are now in the process of fundraising for the development of the Julian Town Square. This is your opportunity to be a part of history! Visit our website to learn more and to make a donation at www.juliantownsquare.org or mail your check to JCHF, P.O. Box 236, Julian, CA 92036. ■

Julian Roots Run Deep

Written by Megan Peralta

Julian may be home to some of the best apple pies in San Diego County, but its historical roots stretch even deeper than our famous apple trees.

For generations, this area was inhabited by Native Americans. In the mid-1800s, European settlers arrived. The Julian settlement was originally a mining camp, thanks to cattleman and former slave A.E. "Fred" Coleman, who in 1869, found the first flecks of gold in what is now Coleman Creek.

After the Civil War, Confederate veterans migrated to Julian in search of gold, and Drue Bailey and Mike Julian, two cousins from Georgia, were among them. In 1870, Bailey officially founded Julian City and christened it in honor of his cousin. Within two years, there were several hotels, stores and restaurants, in addition to a schoolhouse and saloons.

The mines in Julian and the Banner area yielded millions of dollars in gold ore. Today, visitors may take tours of an authentic mine.

While many mining towns blossomed and then turned into ghost towns, Julian survived, likely due to its agricultural potential and its location near San Diego.

It proved to be a rich land for crops and pasture animals. In the early 1870s, however, another seed of fame was planted when James Madison brought in a wagon load of young apple trees.

The climate and soil were perfect for such a venture, and Julian apples won blue ribbons at the 1893 San Francisco World's Fair and the 1915 Chicago World's Fair.

The American Pomological Society also awarded Julian apples the Bronze Wilder Medal at the 1907 Tricentennial Exposition in Jamestown, VA. More than a century later, visitors still flock to Julian in the fall for the apple harvests at local orchards and to enjoy freshly baked pies and apple cider.

Julian Pioneer Cemetery, which is open to the public, is the final resting place for many of these early pioneers. Today, the town is a designated Historic District, and the residents and shop owners delight in sharing its legacy. ■

TREAT YOURSELF

By Megan Peralta

The Olde Goat

In recent years, Julian has expanded its repertoire of attractions to include many options for mind and body health and wellness.

For physical relaxation and revitalization, visit the Julian Wellness Center, home of alternative healing resources. The center offers a range of services with certified providers, from acupuncture and reiki to therapeutic massage and bioenergetic wellness scans.

If you're interested in otherworldly experiences, drop by the mystical Moonshine Magic shop, where you can immerse yourself in the enchanting craft of crystals, gems, blessed candles, essential oil blends and more.

At Balm Lady Apothecary, you'll feel the serenity of an all-natural approach to life with hand-blended herbal teas and salves, aromatherapy fusions and more. You can also experience shamanic healing with a certified practitioner.

Feeling tense? There's nothing like stretching out on a yoga mat with a goat for a companion. For a truly unique experience, come to The Olde Goat for goat yoga with Mackenzie McTaggart, a registered yoga teacher, who received her certification in Rishikesh, India, and who incorporates mindfulness practices to enhance balance and clarity.

For premium pampering, go to The Julian Soap Company for candles that almost smell too good, ultra-rich goat milk lotion, hand-made bath bombs and artisan soaps that turn bath-time rituals into luxurious experiences.

HIT THE TRAILS

Written by Angela McLaughlin

The Julian area's stunning backdrop of rolling foothills and seemingly untouched landscape make for an inspirational setting for backcountry hiking. These trails are sure to quench your craving for adventure.

Stonewall Mountain

STONEWALL PEAK

Cuyamaca Rancho State Park features a number of hiking trails and outdoor activities, but the view atop Stonewall Peak cannot be missed. This short, two-mile hike is sure get your heart rate going. And the 360-degree views from the summit at 5,730 feet are breathtaking.

To access the trail, park at Paso Picacho day use area at 13652 Highway 79. The trailhead is across the highway. Be sure to check for any trail closures before you visit and purchase a day-use pass.

WILLIAM HEISE COUNTY PARK

Hikers looking for a variety of trails are sure to enjoy William Heise County Park, located at 4945 Heise Park Rd. With more than 1,000 acres of land, the sprawling park offers plenty of space to stretch your legs. It's a choose-your-hike kind of place, from the one-mile Cedar Trail loop to the 5.75-mile Kelly Ditch Trail, which travels all the way to Lake Cuyamaca, and more.

The park is close to the town of Julian while feeling a world away. There are trail options for hikers, bikers and equestrians.

VOLCAN MOUNTAIN WILDERNESS PRESERVE

Surrounded by orchards, vineyards, woodlands and farms, Volcan Mountain is a sight to behold. With nearly 3,000 acres of mixed forest land, the preserve offers hikers a good dose of wilderness. There are different routes to take up the mountain, but Five Oaks Trail is specifically for hikers and provides more seclusion.

The view from the summit at 5,353 feet is well worth the effort. The hike totals just over five miles and is considered moderately strenuous.

The trailhead for the summit is located at 1209 Farmer Rd. at Wynola Road. ■

Remember to prepare for your hike by packing a first aid kit and bringing enough food and water for the entire trip. Be sure to tell someone where you will be hiking and when you intend to return. And make sure to leave the trail better than you found it – pack out everything you bring in.
